Crown Copyright

Re-using Crown copyright material

You may use and re-use the information featured on this website (not including logos) free of charge in any format or medium, under the terms of the Open Government Licence

Any enquiries regarding the use and re-use of this information resource can be found by contacting the National Archives.

Re-using third party material

Any material on this site which is identified as the copyright of a third party is not covered by Crown copyright. This the case with some photographs. Authorisation to reproduce such material must be obtained from the copyright holders concerned. The copyright status of items can be checked in advance of use by contacting: ceu@gov.scot.

Linking to the Scottish Government website

The Scottish Government encourages users to establish links to the site. You don't have to ask for permission to do this.

Images, photography and video

Images and photographs on this site are subject to Crown copyright protection unless otherwise indicated. You may re-use Crown copyright images subject to the conditions stated above. Images and videos on the Scottish Government's Flickr site and Scottish Government's You Tube channel are subject to the licence restrictions shown on those sites, but are normally available to be re-used with attribution for non-commercial purposes only.

Further information

For further information on Crown copyright policy and licensing arrangements, see the National Archives guidance.

Publications

The Scottish Government publishes over 1,000 items each year. Decisions on what is published and publication design is devolved to the departments. Current corporate policy is for all of the publications to be available on the Scottish Government website. Many of them are web-based only but some are also available as paper publications from BookSource (see below).

Please note : Scottish Government publications are no longer available from Blackwell's Bookshop.

Finding a publication

All publications are available in both HTML and PDF formats. On the website publications are listed under Publications and Consultations.

Publications can be filtered by date, subject, topic and keyword.

The consultations are searchable by Current and Closed consultations.

Details of Scottish Government publications are also available on UK-wide official publications listings such as UKOP.

Bibliographic control

Bibliographic details for publications, including ISBNs, can be obtained from both print and pdf versions of the publication. Current corporate policy is for an ISBN to be allocated to all publications whether available in printed or web-only format.

HTML versions of publications may differ from print/PDF versions for example in exclusion of graphics/tables etc. References made using the HTML version should ensure that HTML referencing guidance is followed to minimise confusion.

Where possible HTML versions will contain references to the ISBN of the Print/PDF version to ensure the relationship is clear.

Coverage of the publication listings

The website publication pages and related listings do not include Bills, Acts, Statutory Instruments or papers presented to the Scottish Parliament by the Scottish Government other than those prepared by the Scottish Government. This material is available either through the Scottish Parliament website or legislation.gov.uk.

- Scottish Parliament
- Leglislation.gov.uk
- Publications from Scottish Government or other related, but external, bodies may not be available on the website. A useful site for identifying other government/official sites and their publications is: https://www.gov.uk
